

The NCMS House of Delegates is the policymaking body of the Medical Society and is composed of representatives of component medical societies, designated sections, medical specialty organizations represented on the Coordinating Council of Specialty Societies, student members, physician assistants and those individuals designated in the NCMS Constitution and Bylaws. The House of Delegates convenes annually to discuss a variety of reports and resolutions that seek to address a broad range of issues affecting health care, the doctor-patient relationship and the practice of medicine.
